Joint Programs is a designation for two Sections holding only one program between them. These receive the first priority in scheduling.

Co-Sponsored Programs of Sections are designations used for Sections holding more than one program together.

Programs with a commitment to be published in a Law Review have the journal’s name listed under the program title.

Call for Papers indicates that Sections selected one or more panel presenters from a Call for Papers proposal; these programs are marked with a ‘+.’

Open Source Programs are competitively selected from proposals by an AALS committee.

Open Programs are sessions organized by law school faculty to consider the creation of a new AALS Section.

AALS Core Educational Values: Guideposts for the Pursuit of Excellence in Challenging Times

The core values of the AALS, which are articulated in Bylaw 6-1, provide critically important guidance in the Association's activities and to our member schools. The core values emphasize excellent classroom teaching across a rigorous academic curriculum. They focus on the importance of faculty scholarship, academic freedom, and diversity of viewpoints. The core values also establish an expectation that member schools will value faculty governance and instill in our students commitments to justice and to public service in the legal community. All of these objectives are to be supported in an environment free of discrimination and rich in diversity among faculty, staff, and student body. These core values combine to provide an environment where students have opportunity to study law in an intellectually vibrant institution capable of preparing them for professional lives as lawyers instilled with a sense of justice and an obligation of public service.

Almost all of our member schools are dealing with extraordinary financial pressures as a result of the economic crisis in the country. Reductions in financial support from state legislatures and shrinking endowments have put unprecedented financial pressure on law schools in meeting their obligations to students and the profession. Almost all law schools are dealing with budget cuts, which have produced a variety of cost saving strategies including hiring freezes, travel restrictions, program and course-offering reductions, and even salary reductions and layoffs.

Other events, including review of ABA accreditation standards relating to student learning outcomes, law school governance, and academic freedom and security of position as well as the changing nature of the legal profession that our graduates will enter, raise additional, potentially challenging issues for the legal academy.

Our 2011 Annual Meeting in San Francisco provides us with an opportunity to discuss how the Association's core values guide law schools as they address the issues confronting legal education. It is precisely because law schools have pursued these values that legal education in the U.S. is the model and envy of the world. Especially in the face of daunting challenges, it is important that law schools continue to be anchored in these values as we adapt to necessary changes in what we do and how we do it.

Because the core values focus on excellent teaching, a rich curriculum, high quality scholarship, academic freedom and faculty governance, nondiscrimination, and diversity, there will be much that can be highlighted. I am looking forward to meeting with you in San Francisco.

The law in the area of sexual minorities and family changes almost on a daily basis. This panel will contextualize these changes in a more wide-ranging debate. Panelists will offer historical and empirical perspectives on issues such as marriage, custody, parenting, single parenting and poverty. Panelists will raise questions about how history and social science literature are used in legal arguments.

Moderator: Taylor Flynn, Western New England College

The California marriage litigation and subsequent federal lawsuit highlight a particular tension in family law: equal treatment and full faith and credit on one hand and the value of preserving states as laboratories for experimentation where new and different forms of family recognition can be developed, on the other. Similarly, transgender persons have achieved some successes in individual states, but are hampered by lack of national uniformity regarding legal sex, which produces uncertainty on issues of marriage and child custody. In addition, this panel reflects on constitutional change by considering issues raised by the marriage litigation such as the appropriate level of scrutiny and the problem of differentiating between animus and morality.

The law and advocates engaged in disputes over marriage and family make varying assumptions about facts of social life and the appropriate aims of legal regulation. This plenary panel questions these assumptions and asks who actually benefits from the positions social movements and advocacy organizations take. The panelists will explore issues such as feminist and critical race critiques of marriage, and the right to marry, as a movement priority; the failure of lesbigay legal reform programs adequately to protect transgender youth and their precarious location vis-à-vis family; and whether it is proper for the state to seek to “establish” and confer favor upon any particular family formation.

A conservative political activist has called the abortion and marriage debates “one and the same issue,” contending that “abortion does at the physical level what homosexual marriage does at the institutional level.” What competing visions are at stake in several decades of social movement conflict over sexuality, gender, and the family? What do these conflicts teach about law’s capacity to effectuate social change? Is backlash inevitable or avertable? How are movements changed through conflict, in the encounter with law, and with each other?

Women and Conspiracy

Mary Anne Franks, Cornell Law School

Angela Harris, University of California, Berkeley School of Law

Moderator: Bennett Capers, Hofstra University School of Law

Prosecutors have long used conspiracy law to cast a wide net over criminal activity. More and more often, the peripheral characters caught in this net are girlfriends, wives, and mothers. What are we to make of this use of conspiracy law, not to mention other complicity tools such as aiding and abetting, in this context, and the drastic increase in the number of incarcerated women? Is this a case of over-enforcement, or a sign of gender parity? How are these prosecutions informed by the war on drugs? To what extent do these prosecutions implicate issues of race and class? Is the problem with complicity law in general? In short, is it time to reconsider complicity and women?

Enlisting and Resisting: The Family and the Criminal Justice System as Partners and Rivals

Jennifer Collins, Wake Forest University School of Law

Melissa E. Murray, University of California, Berkeley School of Law

Jeannie Suk, Harvard Law School

Moderator: David A. Sklansky, University of California, Berkeley School of Law

Families and the criminal justice system, once nominally separate sites of authority, seem increasingly intertwined. The criminal justice system regulates families in ways that seem new, and enlists families in novel partnerships against crime, disorder, and victimization. But are these developments really new? And are these true partnerships, or is the family being enlisted in its own destruction or marginalization? This panel will explore the changing relationship between families and the criminal justice system, new opportunities for the two to work hand-in-hand, and new threats posed by the increasingly intimate interaction between these two ancient modes of authority and social regulation.

Should Good People Be Prosecutors? A Debate between Paul Butler and State's Attorney Glenn Ivey

Paul Butler, The George Washington University Law School

Glenn F. Ivey, State's Attorney, Prince George's County, Upper Marlboro, Maryland

Moderator: Angela J. Davis, American University Washington College of Law

Professor Butler, a former prosecutor, argues that people of good will should not be prosecutors because they add legitimacy to an unfair criminal justice system that unfairly incarcerates disproportionate numbers of African Americans. Mr. Ivey, the District Attorney for Prince George's County, challenges this view, arguing that prosecutors protect and respond to the needs of communities besieged by crime. Come join this provocative debate.

Jennifer M. Chacon, University of California, Irvine Donald Bren School of Law

Lisa L. Miller, Associate Professor of Political Science, Rutgers University, New Brunswick, New Jersey

Daniel C. Richman, Columbia University School of Law

Moderator: Tracey Meares, Yale Law School

We often think of criminal policy as being local, yet it is also true that the United States' unique multi-tiered political system exerts pressure on criminal policy and shapes it in ways that sometimes empowers higher levels of government. Historically, this dynamic has been considered an unalloyed good, for the federal government in particular traditionally acted as a bulwark against the tyranny of the majority in favor of individual rights. More recently, however, many have noted both the rise of political power by racial minorities in cities and their increasing ability to control local social policy agendas, including criminal policy. This panel will explore these dynamics in the context of enforcement of immigration laws, investigation and suppression of terrorism.

Library budgets are complicated beasts combining unpredictable and predictable costs: fixed personnel costs, with shifting operational needs, join rapidly changing materials expenditures. Some expenditures are fixed while others leave room for flexibility if you know where to look. This program will discuss how to analyze the various components of a typical law library budget on an annual and prospective basis.

The program will also include a hypothetical annual budget conversation between a law school dean and her library director. The conversation will illustrate how the needs of the library interface with the overall financial challenges and will include strategies for effectively resolving the competing interest. A panel of deans and librarians will further reflect upon the information shared and issues raised earlier in the first portion of the session.

The Law Library as a Force to Strengthen the Institution

Speakers to be announced.

In challenging times successful librarians have seized the opportunity to provide innovative services that extend beyond the traditional "wells" of the library. As professional service providers and knowledgeable members of the law school community, they actively contribute to the mission of the law school by providing a wide range of non-traditional services to departments throughout the law school. These include diverse services such as publishing faculty scholarship, assisting with international programs, making contributions to the web, and supporting job placement. In this program the panel will discuss a wide range of innovative services provided by our librarians in challenging times.

How should law library spaces evolve in a digital era, when students, faculty, and the community may have changing (and at times inconsistent) expectations for the facilities in which they work and interact? This session will provide an overview of the changing physical spaces in law libraries, noting how the law library might better meet mission-driven demands.

The field trip will tour selected sites in the San Francisco Bay Delta. Speakers will address the Delta's precarious environmental conditions, tensions between water quality and water supply demands, and legislative and judicial efforts to respond. They will also address the land use challenges posed by development below sea level and the aging levees intended to protect it. The tour will include stops along the Delta, at critical water supply junctures, at historic river towns, and at a Nature Conservancy project intended to model sustainable land use options. The community service project will be at the St. Anthony Foundation (SAF) in the Tenderloin neighborhood of San Francisco. The mission of SAF is to feed, heal, shelter, clothe, lift the spirit of those in need, and create a society in which all persons flourish. The Foundation is guided by the values of healing, community, personalism (respecting diversity and treating all people with dignity and respect), justice and gratitude. This service project will include an introduction to the St. Anthony Foundation, the Tenderloin, and the unmet legal needs in the community. The hands on part of the project will include assisting in preparing and serving the lunch meal (in which we will be invited and encouraged to join the guests for lunch). Other opportunities may be available depending on the size of the group, including working in the Tenderloin Tech Lab, Adult Day Health Centers, St. Anthony's Clothing Program and delivering meals to homebound seniors. After the meal, we will gather with a SAF staff member to reflect on the experience. Every day, the Foundation provides over 3,500 people with food, clothing, recovery help for their drug and alcohol addictions, and medical care on a daily basis. We invite AALS members to come along for this meaningful and informative service project.

Topic: Translating and Mistranslating Social Science for Law

Speaker: Joseph Margulies, Northwestern University
School of Law

Professor Margulies will lay the groundwork for the program that follows by discussing the difficulties that the legal profession faces in achieving good translations of social science. He will begin by using the issue of predicting future dangerousness as an example of how these kinds of translations can go awry. Margulies will also discuss wider lessons from decades of socio-legal research that could be useful to the practicing bar in thinking through their role in social change. He then considers how we might produce better translations of social science, moving to examples from the field of implicit bias — in particular as they affect our dealings with accused “terrorists” in the United States. His emphasis on improved translation between law and social science fits within a growing tradition of “new legal realism” in the legal academy.

[5185] AALS Committee on Curriculum Issues Program

Topic: The Importance of Student Assessment

Student assessment is an important aspect of our work in legal education. How can the methods we use to evaluate student progress further – or imperil – our efforts to nurture accomplished and responsible professionals? This program will consider assessment methods as tools for fostering learning and for identifying and developing the full range of skills necessary for excellence in the practice of law.

We recognize that discussions of assessment often are laden with jargon that can be off-putting to law school faculty. This program will move beyond jargon to discuss several critical purposes of assessment. We will explore in detail how achieving our educational goals may require us to reconsider and reconfigure the way we measure student progress. We also will consider assessment in light of students' educational and psychological needs, and examine the new work in this area that is being done by law professors around the country. The program will include demonstrations, discussion and specific examples of innovative assessment techniques. We anticipate that the first panel will take approximately 45 minutes, with the second panel directly following.

2:00 – 2:45 P.M.

• Part I - Why Student Assessment MattersSpeakers:

Aderson Francois, Howard University School of Law

Meredith J. Harbach, University of Richmond
School of Law

Gregory S. Munro, University of Montana School of Law

Moderator: Elizabeth M. Schneider, Brooklyn Law School

This panel first will ask the question: what are we assessing? Possible answers include: communicating effectively; developing analytical skills; exercising professional judgment; and understanding and interpreting doctrine. Panelists will consider the range of skills students need to master, and how law teachers can improve student learning through the assessment techniques they use. This panel also will examine lessons from recent research on the impact of traditional assessment methods on student engagement and motivation. Finally, it will explore internal challenges to changing assessment methods, including faculty scholarship expectations and the use of student evaluations of faculty. External developments in legal education that raise questions about assessment, including reports from the Carnegie Foundation and proposals by the Department of Education and the American Bar Association, also will be identified.

• Part II - Improving Learning and Student Engagement Through Assessment

Speakers:

Mary Patricia Byrn, William Mitchell College of Law

John Burwell Garvey, Franklin Pierce Law Center

Barbara Glesner Fines, University of Missouri-Kansas City School of Law

Joan Heminway, University of Tennessee College of Law

Steve Sheppard, University of Arkansas School of Law

Moderator: Peggy Cooper Davis, New York University School of Law

Through both discussion and demonstration, panelists will provide concrete examples of a wide range of assessment approaches and describe how law professors can incorporate them into their teaching in a variety of settings. Examples will include: methods of providing feedback to students in large classes; the use of peer evaluation and self-assessment techniques; the assessment of judgment and of intrapersonal and interpretive skills; the use of student portfolios; and the use of final exams to measure a variety of student skills.

Law professors' research plays an important role when it translates science and social science for legal purposes. Law reviews are frequently the sites where existing empirical research is systematically reviewed and applied to legal issues, creating a resource on which policymakers and practicing attorneys can draw. Law professors have the time and expertise to translate evolving knowledge in other parts of the academy into terms that make sense in terms of formal law (statutes, court opinions), on the one hand, and to practicing lawyers, on the other. They have an understanding of law that social scientists frequently lack. Increasing numbers of J.D./Ph.D.s may help in the translation process, adding further sophistication about empiricism to the legal perspective. But the task of translating empirical research for law will likely remain located in the law schools, with their special expertise in law.

The topic of implicit bias provides a concrete example of the legal academy's role in translating empirical knowledge. Law professors have played an important role in translating recent findings on implicit bias in terms that make sense for legal practice. Empirical research from cognitive science, neuroscience, and social science is playing an increasingly visible role in helping the legal system gain a more accurate picture of the problems involved in discrimination. Legal scholars have undertaken to interpret and apply this research within some highly contested policy areas in the discrimination field. The purpose of this set of panels is to help legal scholars reflect on the process of translating social science into law.

This session will use an innovative format, in which an initial group of panelists will speak for 50 minutes on the issue of implicit bias at the level of individual actors. After a 10 minute break, a second group of panelists will join the first group for another 50 minute session. This second group will discuss the issue of implicit bias at the level of institutional actors, including employers. After a second 10 minute break, the two panels will jointly reconvene to discuss what lessons can be drawn from the day's presentations about the use by legal scholars of social science in their own research. In particular, they will focus on how to generate the most productive translation of science and social science for law – and on the role of law professors in that process.

Association of American Law Schools Presidential Programs

[6320] Presidential Program I - Teaching Excellence: Integrating Knowledge, Skills, Values and Assessment

David B. Babbe, University of California, Los Angeles School of Law (formerly of Morrison & Foerster)

Roberto L. Corrada, University of Denver Sturm College of Law

Ingrid Michelsen Hillinger, Boston College Law School

Hiroshi Motomura, University of California, Los Angeles School of Law

Moderators: Alison G. Anderson, University of California, Los Angeles School of Law

Gerald F. Hess, Gonzaga University School of Law

A large and sophisticated empirical literature about teaching and learning tells us that effective classrooms are learner-centered, knowledge-centered, assessment-centered, and best seen as a community built on active, cooperative learning. Excellent law teachers integrate knowledge, skills and values in their classroom teaching, building in opportunities for assessment during the semester as well as at the end of the course in order to ensure that their students are actually learning what is being taught. Within a framework of basic concepts from learning theory, experienced law teachers and one experienced practitioner will talk about what constitutes effective teaching and mentorship both in the classroom and in the development of new lawyers.

[6330] Presidential Program II – Law School Diversity in a Post-Racial World

Devon Wayne Carbado, University of California, Los Angeles School of Law

Elaine M. Chiu, St. John's University School of Law

Rachel Godsil, Seton Hall University School of Law

Tanya Kateri Hernandez, Fordham University School of Law

Moderator: Kent D. Syverud, Washington University School of Law

AALS President H. Reese Hansen in his inaugural address, "Principles to Guide Us," spoke about the importance of focusing on AALS core values during these uncertain times. One of those core values is the value of diversity in the classroom, the profession, and the judiciary. He highlighted the diminishing enrollment of Black and Latino/a students in our law schools since the turn of the 21st century as well as the pressure faced by member schools to focus on securing higher LSAT scores with each new incoming class. The other core value he discussed was the importance of preserving faculty governance. This panel will focus on both of those core values by examining diversity issues facing students as well as faculty members all during a so-called "post-racial" era.

Professor Hernandez will discuss the new Department of Education guidelines on "counting" the race and ethnicity of our students and what impact that might have for member schools as well as on the AALS' core value of diversity. Professor Godsil will describe a study she is collaborating on that for the first time attempts to apply the "stereotype threat" literature in the context of undergraduate students taking the LSAT. Professors Chiu and Carbado will discuss the 21st century challenges of recruiting and retaining, respectively, professors of color. Time will be left for significant audience participation and this should prove to be a lively and thought-provoking session.

[6500] AALS Presidential Program - Film Screening of Divided We Fall: Americans in the Aftermath

Valarie Kaur was a 20-year-old college student when she set out across America in the aftermath of 9/11, camera in hand, to document hate violence against her community. From the still-shocked streets of Ground Zero to the desert towns of the American west, her epic journey confronts the forces unleashed in a time of national crisis – racism and religion, fear and forgiveness – until she finds the heart of America... halfway around the world. The journey to make the film began when Valarie Kaur drove across the country in the immediate aftermath of the terrorist attacks on September 11, 2001, documenting stories in the Sikh, Muslim, and Arab American communities. Over the next five years, Valarie Kaur’s journey unfolded into a larger exploration of ‘who counts’ as American. In 2005, award-winning director Sharat Raju and his film crew joined Valarie as she retraced her steps across the country, revisiting her original interviewees and interviewing scholars, lawyers, and legislators about race, religion, and security in post-9/11 America.

Making the transition from writing law review articles or completing a dissertation to writing a book is a daunting task, especially if you do not have a strong mentor to guide you through the process. The Committee seeks to assist interested scholars in learning the ins and outs of book publishing so that they can enhance their publishing success. There are, of course, many types of books (academic books, trade books, casebooks, student study aids, authored books, and edited books, for example). Due to time constraints, this workshop will focus on scholarly and academic books rather than casebooks or practice materials. It is also important to note that there are many excellent publishers to consider when pursuing a book project. Since we could not, of course, include everyone on our panel, we direct all of our attendees to visit the AALS Exhibit Hall (open Wednesday through Friday) to explore the full range of the publishing options available.

Saturday, January 8, 10:30 a.m. – 12:15 p.m., continued

Led by authors with experience at preparing and soliciting manuscripts in a variety of categories, this workshop seeks to bridge the gap between being a productive scholar and a first-time book author. Editors from several book publishers will explain what they look for in reviewing a book proposal and how their press approaches the contract and publishing process.

The session will be conducted as a conversation with the moderators posing questions to the various participants. There will be time set aside for audience questions. Attendees are encouraged to visit with workshop speakers and with the editorial representatives of other publishers in the AALS Exhibit Hall (open Wednesday through Friday).

AIRPORT TRANSPORTATION

The closest airport to the Hilton San Francisco Union Square, Parc 55 Wyndham San Francisco Union Square and the Hotel Nikko is the San Francisco International Airport (SFO). All three hotels are about a block away from one another and are located approximately 17 miles from the airport. Taxi service to the hotels is approximately $40 one way.

Several shuttle service companies offer transportation from the airport, with prices starting around $20 and up. Super Shuttle is available at SFO from $20.

Oakland International Airport is located in the East Bay. A cab ride from Oakland will be about $50 to $65. There is a shuttle to the Oakland BART station as well. The shuttle is free, and BART will be about $5.

CITY TRANSPORTATION

While traveling within San Francisco, there are several travel options. BART is the subway system, which services the city and east bay (Oakland, Berkeley, SFO) from approximately 4:00 a.m. to midnight during the week; fares are about $5 from the East Bay to downtown. The closest stop to the Hilton is the Powell Street Station at Powell and Market Streets (2 blocks away). Go to website www.bart.gov for more information on schedules and fares.

Municipal Railway (Muni) operates buses, electric trolleys, streetcars and cable cars around the city. Fares are $2.00 except on cable cars where the fare is $5. Muni passports are available for one day ($13), three days ($20) and seven days ($26). These cannot be purchased online and need to be purchased in person.

See <http://www.sfmta.com/cms/mfares/passports.htm> for more details.

Cable cars are also available, with the Powell street turn around being one/two blocks from the hotels. A single ride is $5.

PARKING

The Hilton San Francisco Union Square offers valet or self parking options for guests. Valet parking is $56.63/day. Self parking is $52.01 per night.

The Parc 55 Wyndham San Francisco Union Square has valet parking available on property and includes in and out privileges. The rates are $44 per day for a regular size vehicle and $54 per day for oversized vehicles. Hourly rates for hotel guests and visitors are $10 for the first hour, $4 for each additional half hour with a maximum of $44 after 5 hours. For additional information please contact (415) 392-8000 ext 55.

The Hotel Nikko has valet parking available 24 hours with in-and-out privileges. Rates are $10/hour with a $45 maximum (plus taxes). Potential oversize vehicle fees may apply.

MEETING INFORMATION

CHILD CARE

For those in need of child care services, please call the Hilton San Francisco Union Square at (415) 771-1400, Parc 55 Wyndham San Francisco Union Square at (415) 392-8000, or the Hotel Nikko at (415) 394-1111 and ask for the Hotel's Concierge who can provide information on individual babysitting options. Neither the hotels nor AALS recommend these services or agencies but provide this information for your reference.

Please note: The on-site activity center for children has been discontinued due to low participation in past years.

BADGES FOR CHILDREN

Come to the AALS On-Site Registration Desk and ask for a colorful badge for your children who are with you at the Annual Meeting. This badge will provide access for your children into program sessions. There are additional fees for children to attend the Gala Reception, meal events or any other extra fee events.

DISABILITY RELATED ACCOMMODATION

The Hilton San Francisco Union Square is in compliance with the Americans with Disabilities Act. All public areas are accessible and sleeping rooms with special accommodations are available for those with disabilities. Please list any special requirements for your sleeping room on the AALS Housing Reservation Form. If you require a disability-related accommodation, please call the Meetings Department at the AALS National Office by Friday, November 5, 2010 at (202) 296-8851 or email disability@aals.org.

LOCAL ATTRACTIONS

For a comprehensive list of local attractions in San Francisco, visit www.aals.org/am2011/ and click the tab "Local Attractions."

HOUSING RESERVATIONS

Only Annual Meeting attendees who have first completed the meeting registration process will qualify to make hotel reservations at the three AALS convention hotels at AALS group rates. After completing the meeting registration process, you will receive a confirmation email from AALS containing a link with instructions for making a hotel reservation along with list of AALS convention hotels, locations, group rates and reservations methods (online, phone, mail, fax). Hotel reservations can only be made through the AALS official Housing Service, San Francisco Convention & Visitors Bureau/Experient, through the methods listed in the confirmation email. AALS convention hotels will only accept reservations made through the AALS Official Housing service. The housing process is designed to ensure that AALS group rate hotel rooms are reserved by those that are registered for the Annual Meeting—its attendees and exhibitors.

Acknowledgement of Reservation: The San Francisco Convention & Visitors Bureau/Experient will email an acknowledgement of your reservation assignment within 72 hours of processing your reservation. Room reservations made by phone will be confirmed immediately with an acknowledgement number. Attendees can contact the assigned hotel directly a week prior to arrival for the hotels' confirmation number.

Deadline: Reservations must be made by December 17, 2010. If you have not made your reservation by December 17, please visit the website www.aals.org/am2011/ for instructions about hotel availability and how to reserve a room.

Arrival and Departure: Please provide your arrival and departure information when making your reservation. Rooms are available as early as January 3, 2011 and as late as January 9. However, only a few rooms are available at the convention rate at either end of this period.

Occupants in Room: If sharing rooms, please designate one person to make the reservation. List all occupants including children and their ages. Children under the age of 18 may stay free of charge in parent's room. For individuals over the age of 18 sharing a room, there is an additional charge of $20 per person for more than two people sharing a room. You will need to notify the hotel at check in if any of the guests in your room are under the age of 18 and exempt from the extra person charge.

Reserving a Suite: To review hotel suite information, please visit the AALS website (www.aals.org/am2011) and review the suite memo. This memo includes descriptions and diagrams of each suite. When making your suite reservation, please provide the hotel name, suite type and rate. If the suite you request is unavailable, the San Francisco Housing Bureau/Experient will contact you to discuss an alternate suite. Assignment of suites is subject to AALS approval and requires your completed meeting registration.

Disability: If anyone in the room has a disability, please indicate the nature of the disability and any special accommodations needed.

Credit Card Guarantee: A valid credit card with an expiration date of January 2011 or later is required to secure your room reservation. Credit cards will not be processed prior to your arrival. Your credit card will be charged one night's stay plus tax if you fail to cancel before 6:00 p.m. day of arrival or if you fail to check in on your scheduled arrival date.

Prefer paying by check? A credit card is still required to reserve a room even if you intend to pay the hotel by check. A check in the amount of one night's stay and tax must be sent directly to the hotel after December 21, 2010 and prior to December 28, 2010. A copy of the reservation acknowledgment from the San Francisco Convention & Visitors Bureau/Experient must accompany the check.

Changes and Cancellation:

Reservations may be changed or cancelled anytime after receiving your acknowledgement. Before December 22, contact the San Francisco Convention & Visitors Bureau/Experient — the contact numbers will be provided on the acknowledgement. You will also be able to make changes online using the link provided on your confirmation email.

After December 22, wait until December 24 and contact the hotel directly. The hotel phone numbers will be provided on the acknowledgement or can be provided by the San Francisco Convention & Visitors Bureau/Experient.

Cancellation: Cancel by 6:00 p.m. on your expected date of arrival to avoid one night's room and tax being charged to your credit card.

Hotel Reservations: Only Annual Meeting attendees who have first completed the meeting registration process will qualify to make hotel reservations at the AALS convention hotels at AALS group rates. Hotel reservations through the Official Housing Bureau will be available in September 2010. If you register for the Annual Meeting prior to hotel reservations being available, you will receive an e-mail once the Housing Bureau opens, with instructions on how to make your hotel reservation.

Annual Meeting Registration: Each law school teacher and employee must fill out a separate registration form and pay the meeting registration fee. The registration fee includes admission to all AALS programs (excluding the special fee events listed on this page). Those attending or speaking at a single event or session at the Annual Meeting must pay the full registration fee (except for Institutional Advancement professionals attending only the Section on Institutional Advancement program who will pay a separate fee for that program; please contact the AALS if you wish to register for that program ONLY and have not received the separate registration form).

Spouse/Significant Other: If your spouse or significant other, who is not a law school employee or a law student, is attending, please list him or her on this form. By listing them on your form, your spouse or significant other will receive a badge, which they will need to attend any AALS program including the Gala Reception. Also, if you are buying a luncheon ticket for your spouse or significant other, you must list that person on this form. Please note that the law student registration fee does not include a spouse or significant other's attendance at the AALS Annual Meeting.

Meeting Sign-up: Please review the program in this brochure and indicate the meetings you plan to attend by writing the corresponding event codes in the boxes provided. You will find the codes immediately to the left of the program name (e.g. [6290] Section on Trusts and Estates).

Gala Reception (included in full Annual Meeting registration fee): Tickets for the Gala Reception are not required for Annual Meeting registrants: the 2011 AALS white badge is your ticket. This also applies to a spouse or significant other listed on the pre-registration form. Additional guest tickets are only available for sale on-site for registrants' children for the following prices: 5-11 yrs: $50; 12-20 yrs: $80; 21 and over: $125. The Gala Reception is an adult event but children's tickets can be purchased if necessary. Please indicate if you plan to attend the Gala [5270] by writing the corresponding event code in the boxes provided on the Registration Form under "Meeting Sign-Up."

Meeting Registration Fee: Please find your appropriate fee in the chart on the registration form and enter that fee in the box on the right under "Amount." Please note that this fee includes admission to all AALS programs (excluding events requiring ticket purchase.) Registration forms are not processed without payment. Please do not send your registration form without payment included.

Registration Confirmation: Registrations submitted via the Website, fax and mail will receive an e-mail confirmation. Confirmations will be e-mailed to the registrant's e-mail address provided on the registration form.

Registration Questions? Contact AALS registration at (202) 296-8851; or e-mail registration@aals.org
