

AALS Workshop for Beginning Legal Writing Teachers Teaching Research & Citation

Bradley G. Clary, University of Minnesota School of Law
Craig T. Smith, Vanderbilt University Law School

Selected Bibliography

The following are selected recent essays that deal with the topics of teaching legal research and legal citation. All of these essays may be found in the volumes of Perspectives: Teaching Legal Research & Writing, printed by West Publishing “as a service to the Legal Community.”

Teaching legal research:

Marsha Baum, Ten Tips for Moving Beyond the Brick Wall in the Legal Research Process, 10 Persp. 20 (Fall 2001);

Paul Beneke, Give Students Full CALR Access Immediately, 8 Persp. 114 (Spring 2000);

Susan Hanley Kosse and David T. ButleRichie, Putting One Foot in Front of the Other: The Importance of Teaching Text-Based Research Before Exposing Students to Computer-Assisted Legal Research, 9 Persp. 69 (Winter 2001);

Patrick Meyer, Think Before You Type: Observations of an Online Researcher, 13 Persp. 19 (Fall 2004);

Debora Person, Using “Walking” Tours to Teach Research, 13 Persp. 154 (Spring 2005);

Mark W. Podvia, The Use of Trivia as a Tool to Enhance the Teaching of Legal Research, 12 Persp. 156 (Spring 2004);

Jennifer Murphy Romig, “Hooking” Them on Books: Introducing Print-Based Legal Research in a Stimulating Memorable Way, 13 Persp. 77 (Winter 2005);

Joan Shear and Kelly Browne, Which Legal Research Text is Right for You, 10 Persp. 23 (Fall 2001);

Mary Whisner, Managing a Research Assignment, 9 Persp. 9 (Fall 2000).

Teaching citation:

Joan Malmud, Adding Method and Alleviating Madness: A Process for Teaching Citation, 12 Persp. 117 (Winter 2004);

Wayne Schiess, Common Student Citation Errors, 10 Persp. 119 (Spring 2002);

Terry Jean Seligmann, Holding a Citation Carnival, 8 Persp. 18 (Fall 1999).