WORKSHOP EVALUATION

The Evaluation Form is not included in this booklet.
It will be emailed to you soon after the conclusion of the Conference.
Your comments will assist us in planning future conferences.

Welcome

Welcome to Leadership in Tumultuous Times, the AALS Clinical and Experiential Law Program Directors Workshop! We renamed this workshop, a companion to the 40th Annual AALS Conference on Clinical Legal Education, to acknowledge the expanding range of law school faculty who hold leadership positions in clinical law, externship, and experiential learning programs. We welcome each of you to this biennial meeting, which provides opportunities to participate in concurrent sessions and small groups delineated by leadership role.

This workshop was designed to allow you to reflect on and address both existing and developing challenges associated with creating and managing law school experiential learning programs. You can form or enhance your network of colleagues to provide a source of support for the future.

The workshop opens with a plenary session in which the panelists explore how law schools are addressing new ABA standards that require each student to complete six credits of experiential learning. Participants will consider opportunities that arise in professional and program development as law schools expand experiential learning programs, including the creation of administrative positions focused on experiential teaching. This session will also address the challenges that emerge when clinic and externship faculty take on new responsibilities for the experiential curriculum while still leading their own programs.

After concurrent sessions designed according to leadership role, the luncheon will bring workshop attendees back together to continue the discussion of experiential learning under new ABA standards, led by a distinguished panel that includes William E. Adams, Jr., Deputy Managing Director of the ABA Section of Legal Education and Admissions to the Bar.

This workshop closes with small group discussions, again arranged by leadership role. Please note that you may select any concurrent session and small group discussion, even if it does not correspond with your leadership role.

Your strong leadership is vital to the continued advancement of clinical law, externship, and experiential learning programs. This workshop will allow opportunities for engagement, reflection, and generation of ideas and motivation so you leave Denver reenergized to resolve challenges in your leadership roles.

Plenary Session: Clinical Programs, Externships, and Experiential Deans in Tumultuous Times

Plaza F, Plaza Building, Concourse Level

Cindy I.T. Archer, Loyola Law School, Los Angeles

Catherine Greene Burnett, South Texas College of Law Houston

Daniel L. Nagin, Harvard Law School

Margaret E. Reuter, University of Missouri-Kansas City
School of Law

This session addresses the institutional opportunities and challenges faced by experiential education leaders as they help their institutions implement new experiential requirements. This plenary will provide practical approaches for how to address some of the issues that externship directors, clinical programs directors, and experiential deans are experiencing.

CONCURRENT SESSIONS

Cementing the Core of Clinical Programs

Plaza Court 1, Plaza Building, Concourse Level

Leah A. Hill, Fordham University School of Law

Robert L. Jones, Jr., Notre Dame Law School

Elizabeth M. McCormick, The University of Tulsa
College of Law

Aliza G. Organick, University of New Mexico
School of Law

At the 2017 AALS Annual Meeting we began a conversation about the value of legal education. This panel will continue that conversation to discuss how what it means for law schools to cement their commitment to clinical education by identifying the core values and elements of clinical programs.

Assessing and Defining Externship Programs in Tumultuous Times – Part I

Plaza Court 2, Plaza Building, Concourse Level

Elizabeth A. Davis, Lewis and Clark Law School

Alexi Freeman, University of Denver Sturm
College of Law

Avis L. Sanders, American University, Washington
College of Law

Many externship programs are undergoing assessment and transformation as a result of new ABA Standards that require more attention to the programs' academic components, intensify oversight of placement supervising attorneys, and permit paid externships. In addition, early indications of how the ABA will apply the new Standards are available from schools that have hosted ABA site inspections this academic year. This panel will report what those schools' externship faculty have shared about their site inspection experiences, and will offer their own schools' experiences, with particular focus on three hot topics: externship seminar content and credit allocation, maintaining contact with site supervisors, and developing a school policy on paid externships. The panelists will offer a framework and useful tools for how law schools can address these issues.

Experiential Deans: Balancing Interests While Preserving the Core

Plaza Court 3, Plaza Building, Concourse Level

Robert D. Dinerstein, American University,
Washington College of Law
Phyllis Goldfarb, The George Washington University
Law School
Linda H. Morton, California Western School of Law

In 2016, a group of experiential deans decided to survey colleagues in similar roles to better understand the responsibilities and job structures of individuals who are now experiential deans. This seminar will present their findings and discuss the possibility for best practice recommendations that emerged from their research to date.

12:15 – 1:45 pm

AALS Luncheon: ABA Site Visit Discussion Panel on New Experiential Standards

Governor's Square 15, Plaza Building,
Concourse Level

William E. Adams, Jr., American Bar Association
Section of Legal Education and Admissions to the Bar
Peter Joy, Washington University in St. Louis
School of Law
Susan L. Kay, Vanderbilt University Law School
Moderator: Eduardo R. Capulong, Alexander Blewett
III School of Law at the University of Montana

Law schools have begun to be evaluated on their plans and ability to meet new American Bar Association Standards requiring students entering in the fall of 2016 or later to graduate with six units of experiential education. This panel will discuss how ABA site visit teams are evaluating implementation and will provide guidance on how to prepare for such a visit. Attendees will have the opportunity to have their questions and concerns about evaluations answered.

1:45 – 3:15 pm

SMALL GROUP DISCUSSIONS

Creating Courageous, Contextual Conversations: Building Towards Just and Inclusive Communities in Clinical Programs

Plaza Court 1, Plaza Building, Concourse Level

Donna H. Lee, City University of New York
School of Law
Tirien Steinbach, University of California, Berkeley
School of Law

This small group session is for clinical program directors to explore how to encourage, create, and lead conversations about justice, inclusion, and privilege in clinical programs.

Assessing and Defining Externship Programs in Tumultuous Times – Part II

Plaza Court 3, Plaza Building, Concourse Level

Jodi S. Balsam, Brooklyn Law School
Lisa M. Mead, University of California, Los Angeles
School of Law
Mary Nagel, The John Marshall Law School

The new ABA Standards are already encouraging dynamic innovation in externship programs, including improved training of and communications with placement supervising attorneys, heightened attention to hiring and cultivation of externship faculty, and broader faculty interest in experiential learning initiatives that intersect with externships. In this small group session, externship program leaders will lead a discussion about ideas and strategies for innovation and implementation of best practices, focusing on: site supervisor trainings; the now-required written understanding (MOU) among the school, placement site, and student; externship program/faculty status; and externship program coordination with “practicums” and similar fieldwork opportunities supervised by other faculty. The small group will discuss their own school’s experiences and identify resources and models for any law school externship program to draw on as it engages in these areas.

Balancing Interests

Plaza Court 2, Plaza Building, Concourse Level

Jeffrey R. Baker, Pepperdine University School of Law
Ann Marie B. Cavazos, Florida A&M University
College of Law

Law schools and clinical programs are navigating pivotal moments of change, challenge, and opportunity. Each program and school must contend with competing interests and pressures. Falling enrollment and shrinking budgets may put increased pressures on programs to do more with less, while the prevailing trends in legal education demand more experiential learning and clinical opportunities for students. Old models resist new models, but the market demands competitive innovation. In all of this, clinical law professors defend and promote best practices in pedagogy and practice. This session will engage directors in discussions about balancing all of these interests, with creativity and strategic compromise. Through guided questions and structured conversations, participants will discuss how to influence deans and faculties through new ABA rules and how to build effective narratives to advance the work of clinics and externships in local contexts.

NITA is one of the leading non-profit publishers of legal publications in the world. NITA's references, texts, case files, and audio-visual materials are used by thousands of attorneys, and are incorporated into the curriculum at the nation's top law schools. NITA's passion is learning-by-doing, and that goal extends to our extensive library of reference materials in print or on your laptop, tablet, or smartphone, as well as online training courses. With NITA, you always know you will find the most consistent and trusted training publications available.

New in 2017: In an effort to help law schools meet the new ABA mandate for experiential learning NITA developed an Interviewing & Fact Investigation module for students of all practice areas and academic levels. The one-credit course adapts easily to a law school calendar, and can be offered as an "add-on" between semesters, over a weekend, or included in an existing course. Most importantly, it addresses all of ABA Standard 303's revised curriculum requirements for experiential learning. Students who have fulfilled their credit requirement can benefit from the module as a no-credit or pass/fail option to enhance preparation for a career in law.
